

- It all began in the heart of Northern Italy, in the mountain village of Romeno. For generations, the small town had been the home of the Lonzerotti family, where great meals had always been a constant in their daily lives, and where those culinary skills were taught from one generation to the next.
- Luigi and Eugenia Lonzerotti made the decision to immigrate to the USA in hopes of a more prosperous life for themselves and their children. In 1987, their grandchildren opened Lonzerotti's Italian restaurant in a renovated railroad station in Jacksonville, Illinois.
- It's no surprise that the salad dressings and sauces served at their restaurant became local and national favorites! Their products have been bottled and distributed through Lonzerotti's Italian Products since 1994. the business remains family owned and operated, and it strives to make great tasting products!
- Lonzerotti's Sweet Italian Dressing was created especially for the opening of the restaurant and continues to be a favorite of customers from near and far.
